Accessing Triple Zero calls in Queensland

The Right to Information Act 2009 (RTI Act) lets people apply to access documents held by Queensland government agencies. This includes records of calls made to Triple Zero for Queensland Fire (QF), Queensland Ambulance Service (QAS), or the Queensland Police Service (QPS).

Who do I apply to?

Triple Zero calls are sent to the agency whose assistance was being sought:

- For calls to the police, you apply to the QPS RTI Unit.
- For calls for fire assistance, you apply to the QF RTI Unit.
- For calls to the QAS, apply to the Department of Health, which looks after access applications for the Ambulance Service.

How do I apply?

You can apply by filling out the application form. You can use the online form or the PDF form available at www.rti.qld.gov.au. If you use the PDF form, you will need to send it to the agency by post or email at the contact details below.

This guide has more information: How to apply for government documents.

Will it cost me anything?

If you are applying for a copy of a call you made to Triple Zero, or a copy of a call that mentioned you, there will be no application fee.

If you did not make the call, or you were not mentioned in the call, you must pay the application fee. There may also be processing charges if it takes more than five hours to finalise your application.

If you want a transcript of the call instead of the audio recording, you will have to pay the cost of producing the transcript. It will take extra time for the agency to have the transcript made.

Do I have to send my ID?

If you are applying because you made the call or were mentioned in the call, you will need to send a copy of your ID that has been certified by a qualified witness.

These guides have more information: How to apply for government documents.

How long will it take?

Office of the Information Commissioner Queensland

It will take at least 25 business days from the date the agency receives your valid application, and it may take longer depending on the circumstances.

See What to expect when you apply for more information.

Will I get access?

You will generally get access to your own personal information. You may be refused access to other people's personal information. This means that:

- if you are applying for a call someone else made about you, you may be refused access to some or all of it; and
- if you are applying for a call you did not make which was not about you, you are not likely to be given access to it.

If you were not the one who made the call, there can be circumstances where the agency will not be able to confirm that the call was made or who made it. See Neither confirm nor deny the existence of documents - a guide for applicants for more information.
