

2024 Privacy Awareness Week Launch

FREE EVENT!

KEYNOTE + PANEL

Tuesday 7 May

9.30am - 11.30am

The Edge

State Library of Qld

Brisbane / Meanjin

Carly Kind

Australia's Privacy Commissioner

'Powering up privacy in the data age'

When it comes to the digital environment, most Australians want more power over their personal information. But in recent years, many of us have begun to feel that access to and use of our data is increasingly out of our control.

In her keynote presentation, Australia's Privacy Commissioner Carly Kind will discuss how it is essential that promising advances and innovations in areas like artificial intelligence are tempered with responsible practices that empower individuals when it comes to their data. She will explore opportunities to power up privacy protections in the context of both the Queensland and federal governments committing to privacy law reform.

Ahead of reforms, Commissioner Kind will share how public and private sector organisations can enhance transparency, accountability and security to meet the challenges of the data age head on.

Also hear from John Edwards, UK Information Commissioner, as he shares his thoughts on the Privacy Awareness Week theme, 'Privacy and technology: Improving transparency, accountability and security' in a pre-recorded video message.

Register for in-person

<https://events.humanitix.com/2024-privacy-awareness-week-launch>

Watch the livestream

<https://video.ibm.com/channel/the-edge-external-events>

Also featuring...

John Edwards
UK Information Commissioner

Kim Skubris
Journalist
Emcee & moderator

Followed by an expert panel discussion involving:

- Carly Kind, Australia's Privacy Commissioner
- Chris McLaren, Chief Customer and Digital Officer, Queensland Government
- Scott McDougall, Queensland Human Rights Commissioner
- Paxton Booth, Privacy Commissioner, Queensland.